

Interferometric Imaging (Keck Interferometer)

Rachel Akeson

(Email: rla@ipac.caltech.edu)

Michelson Science Center, California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, California

Infrared interferometers with large aperture telescopes have recently become operational and will substantially contribute to the study of star and planet formation. I will review the status of the Keck Interferometer, including the results of visibility amplitude observations of T Tauri and Herbig stars. I will also describe how the future modes of the interferometer will extend the observations of young stars and planets.

