

Nulling Architectures with Three Telescopes

Gene Serabyn

(Email: gene.serabyn@jpl.nasa.gov)

Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, California

Due to the large number of experimental requirements that TPF has, the simplest architectures seem inadequate, while the architectures which can accomplish the mission goals seem overly complex. Here, the intermediate case of a three telescope nuller is considered. Three telescope architectures are found to possess many desirable characteristics and meet many of TPF's experimental goals.

